

San Francisco Families' Union presents:

Segregation and SF Public School Enrollment: What's a family to do?

Join the San Francisco Families' Union for a conversation about segregation in our city, how it misleads us about what makes a good school, and what to do during the enrollment period to help all SF children reap the benefits of diverse schools.

- American schools are as segregated as they were in 1968
- Even in progressive San Francisco, public school segregation has been on the rise for decades
- The metrics most families use to choose schools mislead us about what learning actually looks like & reinforces patterns of segregation
- Research shows going to diverse schools benefits all children

Hear a panel of parents and education experts talk about what they look for in schools, what research has to say about the benefits of diverse schools, and how to see through biased indicators to recognize good schools. Talk with other parents about what this all means for you as a family, and for all of us as a community.
